We all have dreams. For ourselves and for those important to us. Sometimes, though, those dreams go unfulfilled. If it hurts when we fall short, it crushes the spirit when those we love walk down a path we know, beyond the shadow of a doubt, will lead to the destruction of their dreams. What we absolutely must keep tucked inside us, like a sweet lozenge in the cheek that kills a cough, is the understanding that life is a journey. Whatever misfortune comes along, no matter how difficult it is to believe, there is something sweet and good that survives the tragedy. The continuation of Grace Wiley's extraordinary story that began with the novel, How Do You Do, Mrs. Wiley?
