They both have secrets but that can't stop them from giving in to their need for each other. When Lowell gets separated from his team during the fight to save his Alpha's mate, he finds himself nursing a few wounds. The mild concussion and broken nose are mere nuisances that will heal soon enough, but in the meantime his sense of direction isn't what it should be. Kara is hoping to make it through the mountains without making an impression on anyone. She can't afford to be remembered by anyone who might put two and two together when they see her on the news. She knows it's a bad idea to let the handsome stranger tag along with her but he's clearly injured and needs her help. Against her better judgment, she can't help opening up to the sexy hitch hiker, sharing her secrets with him as well as her body. Lowell's wolf is begging to reveal itself to the haunted and beautiful Kara but that's not a risk Lowell can afford for a woman who's destined to be nothing more than a one night stand. When Kara's demons catch up to her the pack finds itself fighting to save more than just than just their brother's human mate as they try to prevent getting dragged into a scandal that could destroy them all.
