Story continued from TEAM TITANS #2 (October 1992); story continues in THE NEW TITANS #92 (November 1992) Elizabeth Alderman and throng of photographers are read to take Deathstroke into custody. As the police frog-march him in front of reporters, Alderman removes Deathstroke's mask. The man beneath the mask is not Slade Wilson however, but the helicopter pilot charged with bringing him. In the sky, the real Slade Wilson takes the helicopter and tries to escape. The police open fire, causing substantial damage to the chopper, but Slade manages to keep it flying. Meanwhile, Wintergreen is likewise trying to get out of New York. One of Sweet Lili's wards, Chan-Li drives him to JFK International Airport, but the security personnel try to take Wintergreen into custody. Despite his advancing years, Wintergreen is still in tremendous shape, and he avoids capture and reaches a private aircraft. Back in midtown, military choppers arrive and try to shoot Deathstroke out of the sky. They angle him towards the East River, but Deathstroke is able to keep the helicopter aloft until he reaches Titans Island. Slade emerges from the crashed vehicle, sustaining only minor injuries.

He has a new threat to deal with now though. The Force Elite of Lord Chaos are present on the island overseeing the construction of their master's temple. They don't take kindly to Deathstroke's presence and attack him. Deathstroke succeeds in disarming two men, and uses their weapons to gun down the rest of the soldiers. As the last of his opponents fall to the ground, Slade suffers a massive heart attack and collapses.
