Will hearts soar when pigs fly? Alex's job working for his family-owned radio station once took him all over the city reporting on major events—until the accident. His scars, both physical and emotional, cause him to withdraw into a self-imposed, semi-reclusive lifestyle. When his dad requests that he go to the world's largest hot air balloon festival, he has to find the courage to break his isolation. Now he needs to find the courage to trust and love again. Jeff had already been planning a move to Albuquerque when he lost his home, parents, and dog to a wildfire in California. To begin his new life, he agrees to help his sister and brother-in-law with their balloon at the Albuquerque Balloon Fiesta. Now he's seen pigs fly and bees kissing, but will he find the love he's been searching for?
