Alex and Katija are quite the pair. Selfish, cruel, greedy, sleazy and violent-why, the negative adjectives could easily fill a small volume of their own. Over the top, always offensive and never politically correct-their sole redeeming quality is, they are not child molesters. Alex is heir and owner of the Holstein Private Investigation Agency, located in Stockholm, Sweden. While he is the agency's brains, Katija provides the brawn, as resident henchwoman. Their setup is sweet, with a never-ending supply of clients appearing at their doorstep and asking for help, only to be swindled out of their money, robbed, or beaten, and then sent on their way. Except some who, wrapped in chains, are dumped into the murky waters of nearby Nybro Viken.

Alex and Katija fight the natural as well as the supernatural-the only thing they really dread is the horrors of gainful employment. This threat is ever present as their finances are chronically atrocious, usually due to the black vacuum of the weekend, with all its powders and pills. Their cases take them across the globe-so beware! There is nowhere to hide.
