The story opens with Frank Wingrove, who had bought an area of land in Tennessee that was already in the hands of a squatter, Hickman Holt, coming to explain the situation to the squatter who, not unnaturally is rather annoyed. They are just about to have a duel when a third party arrives on the scene. This is the start of the main events of the book, for Frank has fallen in reciprocated love with one of the two beautiful daughters of the squatter... The story takes the reader in the direction of California, into the hands of the Indians, and the encampment of a Mormon train, that is making its way towards Salt Lake City. --freefictionbooks.org
