Historical Romance Nominated for the 2015 RONÉ “Best Indie or Small Published book of 2014 Award” Beth Jago appears to have the idyllic life-she has a trade to earn a living and a cottage of her own in the beautiful River Valley. When Beth starts receiving threatening letters demanding that she leaves the only place where she has been happy, she is determined to stay. When a stranger enters her home, Beth defends it with a pan, but in doing so robs the man of his memory. Brought together by unknown circumstances, she reluctantly offers him her help until he recovers. Yet can she trust the man with no name and no past that now lives beneath her roof or is he as dangerous as his nightmares suggest? As the threats worsen, it is not only her home she risks losing.

Her reputation and her heart are affected by the handsome man's presence but, unknown to her, the stranger is aware someone is watching her.
