There is something you want, isn't there? Is it more success? More money? Greater impact? More control? The question is, do you want it enough to part with your time, money and energy for some insight into how to make it a reality? If so, Making it Happen is the book for you.

Peter Sheahan has transformed his own life from managing hotels in his youth to being the founder and CEO of a highly successful consultancy called the Centre for Skills Development, which undertakes large-scale behavioural-change projects. Having shared his thoughts on counter-intuitive business thinking in his book Flip!, he now wants to enable you to take your ideas and make them happen. Are you ready to answer the call? Are you going to leave your current organisation better than when you arrived, or set up a successful company of your own? Is your career going to be worth talking about? What will you tell your children, and your children's children, about your life? Will they be proud? Will they want to retell your story? Will your life be an example of what is possible? The world is full of ideas - everyone has them - but the world does not have enough people who know how to turn their ideas into great results. Peter Sheahan is here to help you to make a difference.
